You win. I saw the team today and they are clearly upset. I am not going to destroy [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] opportunity to be happy work. I can see on everyones faces that we are tearing this company apart and, despite what you believe, I actually care about that entire team.

As for me, I am just sick with anger. I think you are too. I am done being angry. There will be nothing left to fight over, once litigation starts. Our claims will be public and it just gets ugly from there. I can't sign the settlement the way it is written but if you want the phone number, take it. We don't need to burn down both our careers over a phone number. It's just stupid. My attorney says the war we are starting cannot be undone and the most likely outcome is dissolution. I don't want to dissolve the company. So I am not filing anything. You want to file on me, I will pay the filing fee and counter. But the ball is in your court.
